New Education Web Pages

Check out the new education pages on our website. While there, be sure to click on the Looking at the Collection link, <http://www.marquette.edu/haggerty/educational-programs-faculty.shtml>, created by former Haggerty education intern Meghan Wingert as part of her master's thesis project in museum studies at the University of Illinois at Chicago.

Here's a snapshot:

Look and Learn: The Haggerty as Classroom

The Haggerty Museum of Art is a teaching and learning resource for faculty, students, teachers, and the community at large. Our permanent collection and exhibitions serve as a foundation for object-based learning. As an experiential classroom, the Haggerty uses images and art objects as source material: visual art acts as a powerful and stimulating tool for learning and compels viewers to look closely, question and interpret what they see, and consider a variety of concepts and issues in the process. It is in this way that the museum provides a platform for interdisciplinary engagement with the arts and promotes visual literacy and critical thinking.

We encourage you to explore the educational activities and opportunities outlined in the tabs below. There you will find additional information and resources to help you learn by looking at art.

FACULTY

Teach in the galleries, develop classes with the Curator of Education, co-curate exhibitions, and explore connections between art and your curriculum.

UNIVERSITY STUDENTS

Join Art Club, become an intern, and learn more about other student activities at the museum.

K-12 EDUCATORS

Bring art to your classroom through Picasso Across Curriculum and Water Across Curriculum or schedule a docent-led tour.

COMMUNITY

Join us for a tour or event, or explore art on your own by taking advantage of complimentary admission 7 days a week.
